THE AURICLE-A MEDICAL SOCIETY PUBLICATION NOV. 6, 1980

Notice to all OMA members: You are entitled to receive both the Ontario Medical Review (monthly), and the Canadian Medical Association Journal (CMAJ) (bi-weekly) for your $11.00 membership fee. If you are not receiving the CMAJ, write a brief letter stating this fact to the following address:

CMA Membership Dept.
1867 Alta Vista Dr.,
Ottawa, K1G0G8

Notice to all non-members of the OMA: You must be very unhappy people. Come home to a full mailbox! Let your dog get to know the postman. Indulge in a good nights sleep, snug with the knowledge that the OMA that you support is looking after your Clerkship Stipend and OSAP support. Belong to something! Besides, it's very cheap.

Just send $11.00 to: OMA Membership
240 St. George St.,
Toronto, Ontario

BRYCE'S BURGER BAR

Welcome to the epicurean feature of this weeks Auricle. While many of you may have thought that this publication was dedicated to that rather bland organ that is little more than a hole in your head, it is not so! Where does "Auricle" find its roots? Why from the Latin "aura"-emanation, or -auroma and perhaps the Latin "aurum"-gold. Ah yes, a work devoted to golden auromas! Here then is this weeks tasty:

Crepes Asperges Bechamel

Crepes: 1 c flour	Bechamel Sauce: 2 tbsp butter
1 c milk	2 tbsp flour 1 c milk
1 tbsp oil	1 small onion
3 eggs	stud with: 5 cloves
½ tsp salt	½ bay leaf

Combine all ingredients and beat until smooth. When sauce is ready, and asparagus is steaming, dust any frying pan lightly with oil and heat it over a medium hot burner. The oil should spit back when you spit in the pan, (this is a burger bar) but it shouldn't be smoking. Add enough batter to barely cover the bottom of the pan and fry each side until brown.

Sauce: Combine butter and flour in saucepan and place over low heat until mixture is bubbling gently. Add milk onion studded with cloves and  $\frac{1}{2}$  bay leaf and cook until thickened. Place, covered in 350 oven for 20 minutes.

Asparagus: 1 can of tips or fresh (steam for 10 minutes) Place asparagus tips on open crepe, smother with Bechamel and fold 'er up!

This recipe was stolen from a fine little spot in Quebec City and I feel absolutely no reprobation about stealing recipes so if you have a "goodie" submit it to "Bryce's Burger Bar" in the Auricle box in the Medical Society Office.

Yearbook:

Are you or were you a part of a medical athletic team? Do you want a picture of your team in the 1980-81 yearbook? If yes to both questions, then let your athletic rep know so that arrangements can be made with the camera club. If your team doesn't give a picture to one of the yearbook staff, your team picture can't go into the book!!

The Continuing Adventures of Melvin Marvel
Master Medical Student- Part 1

Toronto. City of despair, city of hope.

Midnight. He walks the streets, through darkness, through blizzards, and through a viscious, intellectual fog.

His footsteps echo through the still night. At College and University he turns left. At University and College, he turns right. He walks down a small, concrete pathway and through a hidden door into a great metropolitan hospital.

Taking off his gray jacket and furry mukluks with the bunny tails he quickly dons a set of surgical greens.

He's ready for adventure. He's ready for excitement. He's ready for danger. He's...

Melvin Marvel, Master Medical Student

"Sit down and loosen your socks. This is the case that I call The Unknown Membrane.

It all started innocently enough during a 3AM break in the Nurse's Lounge. I didn't notice when he came in, but the pungent smell of rancid, unsaturated fatty acid filled my nose.

'You are I presume, Melvin Marvel?'

I turned to look at him; a short, squamous man, with large, irregular folds on his ears. I said nothing.

'Give me the negatives', he said.

What cool game was he trying to play?

'Negative?' I answered, 'I have no negative'.

'Then the statue' he riposted. Mand over the black statue'.

'I don't know anything about a statue or a negative'.

'You don't, huh? We'll see about that'.

I felt a strong hand grab me from the back. I detected the faint odour of strawberry puree.

The next thing I knew, I was falling towards the floor, a candidate for never never land...

TME SPORTS PAGE by Sheldon Shaul

The regular Men's Touch Football season has ended and the playoffs loom eminent. The 8T2 Blades and Orfs and the BT4 Muff Divers made it to the playoffs. Both the Blades and the Orfs needed victories in their last game of the season to advance and both were equal to the task. The Orfs squeaked out a narrow 7-6 victory with Danderoo catching the winning convert. The Blades scored a 12-6 win, as Tom Minas made a scintillating catch for the winning points, in their grudge match against last year's champion Barbarians. This reporter wishes them all good luck.

In the world of basketball, Girls A and B played their games after this edition went to press. Men's A, in a pattern that is becoming familiar, marched to yet another victory. Men's B, on the other hand, lost a tight one, 37-33, to the Engineers. Veteran power forward Neil Pelman felt that this was a tough one to lose and that Al Rosenfield was a particular bright light.

Rick Fox, the fighting rabbi, has issued a direct challenge to former heavyweight champion Muhammed Ali. The challenge had but 2 demands: 1) Ali must double his thyroid medication

2) Fox must be given priority for clerkship at whichever hospital the ambulance takes him to.
